Allelic loss of 10q26 region, a putative tumor suppressor gene, and high-grade atypical endometrial hyperplasia. We have identified a region of allelic imbalance on chromosome 10q26 in three independent high-grade atypical endometrial hyperplasia (HGAH) cases. The region harbors several putative tumor suppressor genes that are known to be involved in the development of various tumors and the HGAH of the endometrium could be one of them.NEW DELHI (Reuters) - Indian Prime Minister Narendra Modi's Bharatiya Janata Party (BJP) has retained power in India's top two heartland states of Uttar Pradesh and Bihar, exit polls showed on Sunday, reinforcing its position as the clear winner of national elections. The BJP has retained power in both states where it has governed for the past five years, adding to its tally of 282 in the lower house of parliament and more than 300 seats in the upper house of parliament, based on the results of the exit polls released by 19 news agencies and news channels on Sunday. The exit polls showed the BJP winning between 272 and 278 seats in the lower house of parliament. An exit poll by India Today-Axis My India showed the BJP winning with 283 seats, while a survey by News18-Axis News reported the party getting 286 seats in the lower house. The number of seats that the BJP will be able to form the government with is only as high as 282, with most political parties having said that they will support it as long as the leader of the party is not "anti-national". The results show that Modi has won 82157476af
